TRANSCRIPT:

[0:00] : According to all known laws of aviation, there is no way a bee should be able to fly.

[0:07] : Its wings are too small to get its fat little body off the ground.

[0:11]: The bee, of course, flies anyway because bees don't care what humans think is impossible.

One family hopes to show people how a return to basic mid 19th-Century life can teach us much about how to care for our environment today.

The approach to my accommodation for the night was similar to the ascent into any valley in the Norwegian fjords. Precipitous rocky mountainsides thick with conifer forest increasingly pressed the narrow road to the shores of Haukalivatnet lake. Yet somehow, enfolded in the valley's upper reaches before the increasingly steep gradient precluded the possibility of settlement altogether,

Summary

The article describes a Norwegian family's cabin, Haukali 333, which offers an eco-friendly retreat emulating 19th-century rural life. By recreating the lifestyle of tenant farmers, the cabin aims to teach guests how a simple, sustainable existence in harmony with nature can be both fulfilling and environmentally responsible. It lacks modern conveniences, encouraging activities like fishing, farming, and ...
